DEAR INTERIOR: - This le Monday morning and Marie and I are sitting at the inng dining-table, which "Mee, Ucole Joe" finde needful to accommodate her large family and frequent guests, with our backs to a New Zsaiand coal fire; for this wonderful diamond ear drop of the Orient le rich in coal fields on in everything eine self eup-porting -she writing to one of her "apeoiais" and I to my large "constituency," who have listened so indulgently these years of itinerancy. We are all more charmed with New Zia land than ever; more impressed than ever with its likeness to England; more and more beilevers in its magnificent future, and quite ready to choose this twin of the not yet being weary of our onward flight for the Master -we have no more idea of doing now, or at any future time, than of pluming our wings for a trlp to the moon. Some hear the order, "stay and preach," listen to the command-"Go, preach My gospel" - with an ever increasing emphasia on the "go." Happy these servants, who, in fullest consecration, hear and obly the ewest word of authority of Him who h e many servants with differing gifts under ilim, and 'eave to one 'go' and he goeth; to another 'come,' and he cometh; to another 'do this' and he doeth it." And happier still those cervants who have heart and are so tilled with the sound of the Mester's volce, that they hear and heed no other voices. These last are not wanting, if one will only stop to ilsten for them. But they always fill the life with disquietude and needless self-condemnation, if listened to. Even on the Iloiy Choot, by St. James, rath to us, "My brethren, be not many masters, knowing that we shall receive the greater condemnation." That is, the more masters you have the more miserable you will be. Who is there that has not found it so in trying to follow Jesus? If you read Paul'e life carefuily you will find that he got lnio nearly all his tronbles and committed nearly all his blunders by hearken. ing to the "disciples" and the "brethrer." instead of taking every leading from the to be obliging and not seem obstinate; and eo, concenting to kindly pressure, allowed himseif to be "let down in a backet" over the walls of Damascus, like a basdle of good James, consented in an evil moment to preiend as if he was as good a Jew as any of the bigoted act who clung to iaw with one hand while bolding on to grace with the other. If such an one as Paul yielded at times to this imperious principie of eoclal and religious lifa, eurely weaplritual dwarfe by his side - need to he on our guerd against it day and night. The fact is that if "every one must give an account of himself to God" and not "of" or "to" his neighbore or bretbren; what folly it is to hear any one but God. And If "tn hie own master every aervant standeth or falletin' what a blunder -not to eay crime -is it, to take orders from mny but the Master. I am preaching this little sermon to myself, just now as well as my readers And I have need of it; for some of my

At the August election two magistrates are to be chosen in each megisterial district in the county for a term of five years from June 1, 1887. The importance of electing suitable and competent men to that them, if they think of it at all, is not who his numerous friends hope he will not. are the fitteet men for the position, but who will condescend to take it? This of course results in a great measura from the disinclination of persons to incur the trouble and annoyances incident to holding an office ln which the compensation is next to nothing. A good business man regards it a sacrifice to accept such a position; and really, looking at it from a strictly pecuniary point of viaw, it is a sacrifice. But when we consider the fact that there is no present remedy for the defects in our eystem of county government, but that we must take celved with gratification by those who it as we find it and do the heet we can with it, and that the duties of this office are in some respects of very grave importance, affecting directly the interest of avery citisen and the general welfare of the county for the present and for the future, it would seem that there ought to be patriotlem enough to seenre the services of good and enitable men in every district. The too prevalent habit of estimating a position as being either a high or low one according as officer is restored to the rank he held when it is incrative or the reverse, is nonsensical and founded upon a debased idea of things. It is as much so sa it would be to judge of a man's moral worth hy his rapidity or elowness in money-making, whatever might he his vocation or his methode.

These officers when ecting in the capscity of a county court, are charged with tha entire management of the financial affairs money. of the county, the indicious and proper management of which is by no means an lnsignificant matter. It is their hasiness to support of the poor of the county, which slon for the remark. involves a large and yearly increasing expenditure of money and regulres the exercise of the best judgment and soundest discretion. Those who have had occasion to give their attention to this particular enb ject have found it quite a difficult and perplexing thing to devise methods and means for taking that care of the unfortunete which humanity demands and the law commands, and do so without a waste of public money. It is a husiness that none but cleer-headed, jnst-minded, humane and conscientlous men are fit to transact, and to such only should it ever he entrusted.

VENTURING INTO THE DOMAIN OF FEMININE SHOPPING.

A Phase of Relail Trade Borrowed from the French-How Goods Are Sold to the Women on Credit-Other Trisks of the Venturing into the domain of feminine shopping, I have been astonished to learn of the extent to which the credit system is expanded in this city. The ease with which dry goods can be purchased on trust is mar velous. There are several concerns where materials are sold ou the instalment plan; but aside from that curious phase of retail trade the regular stores sell on credit In a manner that seems reckless. Not only are the wives and daughters of comparatively moneyless men thus accommodated, but sales on that basis are urged upon them. "Oh, yes," said a dealer in reply to an inwe have borrowed that from the French, and it works surprisingly well. Ali we want to know about a woman is who she is and where she lives, and theu we are willing to heap up a counter load of goods for her end not take a cent. Women are not cautious or forehanded as men are. They lack what you might cail that sense of responsibility which makes a man dread committing himself to debt. Women who will walk half a mile to save a ceut on a cash purchase will buy recklessly if payment down is not asked for. They say to each other in the presence of our cierks, "Well, dear, I'm going to buy that. I don't have to pay down for it, and heaven only knows how I ever will pay for it, but it will come out all right." "Oh, yes," the other replies. "I would too; of course it's got to come out all right."

IT COMES OUT ALL RIGHT. "But don't you lose a great deal of money in this way!" I inquired. "Oh, uo; practically none at all, except through adventuresses who would fool us just as much under any system. No, the women are right. When they buy an article that they can't see just how they cau afford to buy it comes out all right! There's a man somewhere who has got to come down. A loving husband, a father, a brother, a rich uncle or somebody or other who may storm and swear a little, but who will not let the lady stand a law suit or even let her cry her eyes very red or beg very hard or coax very eweetly before he relents and squares the bill. All that was found out in Parls long ago. We are infants here compared to the French in dealing with women. A half dozen dressmakers like Worth, a score of fashlonable milliners and jeweiers, Morists, and, in short, all kinds of persone who cater to women in taris, do tumes in this way. They very niuch prefer a woman who deals 'on tick' to a woman who pays money down, and they have made vast fortunes by that plen. Why, all our stores here are petty things beside the Bon Marche and the other big ladies' stores in Paris, and our ways of buy ing goods as well as of selling them are mainly learned from them."

"Yes," I said, "but to get back to the women. Suppose I hadn't $100 in the world and my wife bought a $200 dress; I couldn't pay for it, that's all; and what would you do then!"

"I'll warrant you would pay for it," said the shop-keaper; "or your father would, or her father would. But it is hardly a supposable case. Women do not go in quite as steep as that. They do not wholly lose their heads under this temptation; merely buy a little more or pay a little more than they would do with cash. They know their husband's purses and bank accounts and temperaments, and instead of not straining them at all, they just strain them a little. that's nil. It's only once in awhile that we come across an utter fool of a woman who buys without any judgement, and then we bave a deuce of a thing getting our money. We get it and we do not keep an account with her any more."

OTHER TRICKS OF THE TRADE. The devices for attracting and pleasing customers are various and ingenious. In one store a buffet has been opened for free lunching. A neat mald serves out tiny sandwitches, cake and coffee. She is an expert, however, and puts the dainties where they will do the most good to her employers She discriminates between little and big buyers intuitively, she soon spots those who bring their empty stomachs too often to be filled, and especially is she kind to the children of liberal purchasers. For these youngsters she has a special supply of pastry, and with them she opens the heartr and purses of the fond mothers. Probably this luncheou counter does not cost more than 825 a day, and inducuces more than enough business to pay for itself. A young assistant rector lately got into trouble, not serious but curious, because he served as a personal advertiser for a costuming concern. You must know that the masculine pets in religio-fashionable circles are tho s handsome fellows who are the lieutenants of aged pastors of rich congregagations. The social duties of a pastorate become too heavy and irksome for old men to perform and are largely transferred to the active coadjutors who like them better, and are themselves better liked by the ladies of the church. These affable and talentel juniors are privileged guests in attuent households, they lunch familiarly with the wives and daughters and are consulted in ell matters of temporal taste as well as spiritual concern. Questions of costume are commonly referred to them, and I could mentlou several who are absolute authorities among the sisters in such matters. One has a fine collection of prints, showing the fashions of all ages in women's garments, an I he is considered an unrivaled expert in judging of the effects of colors and shapes in their relations to individuals. Consequently he is consuited in those nice problems of raiment that rack the brains of belies. Frivoious! l'ossibly. I'olite! Never a doubt of lt, for he is the most popular assistant pastor that I know of.—New York Cor. New

FORMATION OF A PEARL

A Dealer's Talk Concerning the Variettes of the Well Knows Gam.

"The process of pearl formation is still a matter of dispute. The ancient poetically ascribed it to a drop of dew failing at morning or evening into the open shell. Now, the most eminent naturalists attribute it to the accidental introduction of some lrritatiug particle of matter into the shell which the animal covers with a pearly secretion, in order to free itself from pain. Some pearls, however, under the microscope, have been found hollow in the interior, and others which are completely solid to the center display in all their parts a regular and conthnuous circular texture without the slightest trace of any foreign matter. It is certain that though the 'irritant hypothesis' is in most cases the productive cause, there are others of a minor nature at work. The Chinese and Japauese are said to aid nature in the production of pearls by carefully pieroing the shell and introducing a particle of sand into the interior.

"There are two species of | vari oysters. One is found in the sea, the other in rivers and running streams. The second class, which is much the smaller, has some slight resemblance to our domestic varieties. The sea variety, ou the contrary, is almost invariably large, about seven or eight inches lit diameter, with very thick shells, rather flat and of a greenish-black exterior, while the interior is of a eliver-white, reflecting the prismatic colors, being, in fact, the ordinary mother-of-pearl of commerce. Hence the shells which contain no pearls are themselves of value. Some idea of the quantity of the material produced may be gathered from the fact that from the eastern fisheries alone 25,000 tons are each year Imported to Europe. Calculating the averago weight of a pearl shell, we have the nsionishing number of from 2,000,000 to 10,000,004 oysters which have been lished from "White pearls are the most staple in Europe and America. In India, China and Jacan the bright yellow color is preferred. Whou a single round or drop-shaped pearl is examined it is easy, by means of comparison, for even an inexperienced buyer to judge its color. Not so, however, when, as is frequently the case, they are strung in a row, as in a necklace. In this case the pearl-stringer arranges the pearls in such a graduation of colors that the trate, imperceptibly blending, appear to be of one hue, when, perhaps, if isolated they would show several tints. The American of 'Panana' variety, though appearing at first sight very white, have almost invariably a sort of blackness under the skin which renders their color far inferior to the pure-white hue of the oriental. Black and lead-colored pearls bring a large price when tine of shape and even color. Some of the most valuable known at present are of this variety. What are termed 'pink-pearls' found principally in North America and the West India Islands, bring a medium price when not too irregular in form.-Chicago News Interview.

lyony and Its Varying Quality. Mammoth tusks of ivory occasionally come to this country from Siberia, but as these have been lying exposed for centuries, end probably for many thousand of years and often buried in ice, the "nature" has gone out of them and they are not fit for the cutler's use. The teeth of the walrus and hippopotamus are used in considerable quantity, and being of suitable size are used whole for making expensive carved handles. lvory of the best quality comes from the west coast of Africa, under the names of Cameroon, Angola, and Gaboon Ivory. This is brought down from the interlor, and retains a large proportion of the "fat" or gelatine, from the fact, probably, that it is more recently from the animal in this state it is cailed "green" ivory. It is more translucent and not so white as the Egyptian and other kinds, called "white" ivory, that have been lying a longer time and in a more sandy region, and expose to the heat of the sun until the animal matter has disappeared. The excellence of the "green" ivory consists in its greater toughness and in its growing whiter by age.-Chambers' Journal

However It may have been in this especial case, it is often enough true that to lake a literary man or woman at his or her word in the declaration that what is said is not for publication is to betray a confidence which secretly believes that the recipient of the confidence will print what he hears. -Boston Cor. HOT FROM THE OVEN.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE SAYS A MAN MUST KNOW HIMSELF.

Is Warm Bread Whelesome? It Depende Upon the Man-No Two Men Are Allke - Sinning Against Our Natures - A Splendift Cook.

"Is warm bread wholesome!" repeated a prominent physician of this city, as the re-porter put the question at him. "Well, it all depends upon the man. That's the best I can say for you. Doesn't warm bread and hot biscuite agree with you! You eat them, don't you!"

"Yes, but I have never been particularly reminded of my ancient annestors in the "Well, young man, I have warm inead or iscults every morning at breakfast." "I am a little, thin fellow, doctor, and eat warm bread, and you are large and flashy and you eat warm bread, and neither of ne are complaining." "Which means that you and I can eat warm bread if we choose Every man must decide that for blusself. Sir Thomas Browne in his writings says that a man is a fool who lives to the age of 40 and is not his own physician. That is the substance of it, don't just remember the exact words. But I think a man nt 25 or 30 who don't know what agrees with him, and acts upon it, comes under the ban of Sir Thomas Browne's raustic remarks.

NO TWO MEN ARE ALIKE "No, my dear boy, it is not the question of whether it is universally unhealthy, this eating of warm bread; it is whether it sults in your particular case. If you find out that warm bread and biscuits are palatable, and you feel no disagreeable effects after eating, why you can ent warm bread as well as anything else.

"Now, my old friend Sir Thomas, says:
There is a finte when every wise man is weary of raising difficulties only to task himself with the solution." Now, the opinion of doctors is of no especial benefit in this matter. If there is anything alling you, and you come to me for a prescription or treatment, I question you as to your habits and the causes that led to your ailment, and then I can give you such medicinea as are needed in your case. But another party might come in with apparently the same symptoms, but my treatment of that party would not be the same as in your case, simply because no two men are "Now I eat my warm blscuits with n cup of coffee in the morning, and I read the newspaper while breakfasting. I know an old man who commences the day with a cocktail early in the morning. About 5 o'clock he has a porterhouse stake, four poached eggs, vegetables (several kinds), a cup or two of black coffee, hot rolls, and a glass or two of sherry. About 11 he takes a good stiff drink of brandy. At 1 he eats tremendous dinner, a whole duck, several kinds of meats, all the delicate preparations of dainty dishes, three or four different kinds of wine, and at night the same process is repeated. Ife drinks wine for his supper, too, and tops off with a nightenp before retiring. New it would be ridiculous to ask If warm bread was lajurious to that man. He is as old a man as I am, but his course would kill me in a week, yet he is in the SINNING AGAINST OUR NATURES. "We all, as a rule, eat too much. We do things persistently and criminally that our natures and consciences cry out against. Some of us mustn't eat warm bread, although I believe a majority of people can eat it with safety. Some of us know we must not smoke, or chew, or drink. And ret you see people who floor neer and liquors of various kinds. They know it is in uring them. But they keep right on, either for social reasons or because of an inordinate craving. People who do like that needn't ask if warm bread is wholesonie.'

Said another physician who was asked concerning the eating of warm bread, rolls

"Well, there is, or seems to be a copular fallacy that warm bread is injurious, yet it is a fact that there is a popular demand and use for warm breads. It does seem as though people do like to humbug themselves luto au idea. Barnum found that out, you know, and it was a fortune for him. I remember a young friend of mine who was married four or five years ago. He is a physician, too. Well he would every now and then go into a fearful tirade against warm bread, hot rolls and biscuits. They were diabolical, dyspepsia breeding, and altogether to be let severely alone. Now all this was before he was married, and even for a while after he married a lovely girl She was a splendld cook, and every morning or evening would set the most tempting plates of hot biscuit or freshly baked hread lefore him. l'oor fellow, he kicked for awhile, but be couldn't stand it, and now he will eat just the hottest biscuits and read that sweet little wife of his will set before him. I was amused to have him band me the fresh, warm bread the other day whon I dined with him.

'This is some of Itose's baking, and we'll both be just mad if you don't try it.' "'Of course I will, says I, 'you know I nlways believe in warm bread.' Ills bealth was never better before than it has been since marriage, but he says it is all just because his Rose does the baking." -- Cincin-

Nile of the Argentine Republic.

This land must some day sustain a population equal to its enhaustless fertility. Its great Nile, the l'a una, bringa to it regularly and annually untoki wealth. .There are only two great rivers on the globe that rise in the tropics and flow out of them. These are the Nile and Parana. When the sun travels north across the great tropical seas he takes up vast cargoes of water and pours them out upon the sources of the Nije. and it overflows its banks. When he travela again across the tropical seas southward he takes up vast quantities of water and empties them upon the sources of the Parena, and it overflows, leaving incalculable wealth behind it. Thus, these two great Me-currents keep up their annual heartthrobs, responding to each other across the equator. One is history; the other is prophecy.—Bishop Fowier in Chicago News.

The Beef-Enters of South America. If It he true that the beedeaters govern the world, then Argentina must bear her full share of government, for she has been eating beef ever since she has been eating anything. Her plains and climate are specially adapted to the easy and profitable raising of cattia. There are no long winters through which they must be nursed. In many of the large states they thrive better in winter than in summer. - Argentina Let-great relief. It has entirely restored me to health." James French, Atchison, Kans., writes: "To all persons suffering from Liver Complaint, I would strongly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilia. I was afflicted with a disease of the liver for nearly two years, when a friend advised me to take this medleine. It gave prompt relief, end has cured me." Mrs. H. M. Kidder, 41 Dwight st., Boston, Mass., writes: "For several years I have used Ayer's Sarsaparliis in my family. I never feel safe, even without lt. As a liver medicine and general purifier of the blood, it has no equal." Mrs. A. B. Alien, Winterpock, Va., writes: "My youngest child, two years of age, was taken with Bowel Complaint, which we could not cure. We tried many remedies, but he continued to grow worse, and flually became so reduced in flesh that we could only move him upon a pillow. It was suggested by one of the doctors that Scrofula might be the cause of the trouble. We procured a bottle of
